Cookie Season 2020

Girl Scout cookie season has come and gone and the girls of Troop 6671 are exhausted. It was a grueling February, full of long hours, friendly customer service and tireless cookie stands.

It all culminated with our special booothing at the Americana two weeks ago. The girls spent several hours charming visitors and customers alike, and educating them on cookie flavors and prices. At the end of the day, they were able to convince people to buy 145 boxes!

The hardworking Brownies made a lot of (rewarding) sacrifices which taught them how to truly value money; build a relationship with customers; and run an earnest business. When they closed shop for the season, they exceeded their own cookie count from last year. It was a very proud moment for the troop and definitely a cause for celebration.

What do the girls plan to do with their earnings? Aside from donating a portion to charity, they are eager to have a restful vacation at Great Wolf Lodge. They can't wait to hang up their Brownie vests, put on their swimsuits and look back on what they've accomplished while looking ahead to bigger goals for cookie season 2021.

♣ FUN FACTS ♣

In 1933, the Girl Scouts of Greater Philadelphia baked and sold cookies for 23¢ per box.

Thin Mints were originally called Cooky Mints in 1939. It got its more popular and current moniker in 1959.

The Girl Scouts sell an average of 200 million cookie boxes each year. It is enough boxes to wrap around the Earth more than 10 times!

Troop 6671 had 12 tired feet, 6 weeks and 1 mission. They sold a total of 2,540 boxes of cookies. Mission Accomplished.
